

PANDEMIC SCIENCE AND COMMERCIAL VALUES

An institutional account for values in science

Manuela
Fernández
Pinto
(Universidad de los
Andes, Bogotá,
Colombia)

In her talk, Manuela Fernández Pinto aims to show how different institutional science frameworks (i.e., funding, regulatory, political, and academic institutions) tend to promote, primarily, commercial and private interests, even in situations with high social stakes. As an example, she will use the global pandemic and the race to develop and distribute vaccines against COVID-19.
